Kei

Stones and pebbles found along shorelines are shaped by currents and tides. The fascination with stones is well documented by travel photographs, displaying stones artfully at home in gardens, and especially in rock stacking, which has had spiritual meaning across cultures for centuries. The act of balancing stones carries with it a practice of patience and an effort in creating balance. Stones fit together naturally with ease, and the result simply feels good to anyone who encounters this natural dynamic.

The inspiration for Kei is to follow the nature of this essential element of our natural surroundings. The Dutch word for pebble, Kei conjures a natural experience at work. Creating a soothing environment for work is the core inspiration of the Kei Collection.

The Bulo Design Team developed a number of shapes and features that stand well on their own, but also group together in clusters for collaborative work to thrive. Kei Collection is Bulo Design Team's first, and best-selling, biophilic design.
